ILLITERACY IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The Bureau of the Census of the Department of Commerce has just published a table giving the percentages of illiteracy in most of the principal countries of the world, the figures having been brought as nearly up to date as the available sources of information permit.

Illiteracy statistics of different countries are not always strictly comparable, because the basis is not always the same. Quite generally, however, the percentage of illiteracy here given is based upon the total population over 10 years of age, which is the basis in the United States, but sometimes it is necessary to accept some other age limit, and in several countries the only available figures refer to illiteracy among army recruits or to that shown by the marriage records.

In the United States the percentage of illiteracy is 7.7 for the total population (over 10 years of age) and 3 for the native white population. In Denmark, Germany, the Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United Kingdom the percentage of illiteracy is lower than that for the native white population of the United States. Doubtless the list should also include Norway, although no figures are available for that country; but in the other European countries the percentage of illiteracy is higher than it is in the United States, and usually very much higher. In Bulgaria it is 65 per cent; in Greece 70, in Hungary 33, in Italy 37, in Portugal 69, in Roumania 61, in Russia 69, in Servia 79, and in Spain 58. There is less illiteracy in Australia than in the United States, but in all other non-European countries the percentage of illiteracy is in general very high.

ILLITERACY IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The term "illiterate," as used in the table below, includes all persons unable to write their own language, except in the case of figures marked with an asterisk (*), where the basis is inability to read. In some instances, however, the figures for army recruits are taken from Otto Hübner's Geographisch-Statistische Tabellen for 1913, in which the use of the term "illiteracy" is not in most cases defined.
